A Painting to Dress In

As a professional artist, Valeria MRAVYAN exhibited in Tokyo Metropolitan Museum of Arts (Japan), Frankfurt Messe (Germany), Chagall House (Israel), Krimsky Most Gallery (Russia), Monserrat Gallery (NY, USA), Los Gatos Museum of Art (CA, USA), to name a few out of Canada galleries.

Some critics find her paintings to have a delicate touch of classical Russian constructivism; Some emphasize a flavour of interesting multi-cultural "symbiosis"; Some point to her expressive freedom of sharing how she feels...

Perhaps all this appears fairly true. However, there still seems to be a bit of an intrigue around Valeria's paintings. One gripping detail could be probably exposed in this context:

When you see more of Valeria's oils, an odd idea emerges: She does not actually "paint on canvas" – she "paints the canvas." Consequently, it awakes a temptation not only to look at them, but to touch them, to be dressed in them – canvas converts into silk, wool, batiste... Unsurprisingly though, bearing in mind that all her life as an artist she... dyes the textile.

A daughter of Moscow intellectuals (father – a writer and artist; mother – a literature translator), Valeria spent her childhood among the books, fine art museums, classical music, and the adults' disputes of timeless issues – good and evil, beautiful and ugly, wise and dull, etc. At age 19, Valeria earned her first professional artist's diploma from the Industrial Arts College; at 26 she got a master's degree in applied arts from the Moscow State Textile Institute. Since then, Valeria happened to change cities and countries before she settled in Toronto (Canada), but through all the years she was doing what she does the best – turning a plain fabric into the Art.

* * *

This will be Valeria's first show in Muskoka (from December 19 to January 12). For this exhibition – "Dreamland" – Chancery Art Gallery has selected mostly paintings with "fairytale" associations, congruent to the spirit of the Holiday Season. Some of her watercolors, tapestry and batik* works will be also presented. You can meet the artist at the exhibition opening reception on Friday, December 21, from 4 PM to 7 PM.

* Batiks from Valeria's collection will be shown in the gallery from December 12 to 20, prior to the solo exhibition of her paintings.

Without betting into the Verbal

"Humanity has aspired to a great many things, and we have all benefited from that aspiration. However, when we bring our assumptions, plans and desires to human relations, we are forever betrayed, not by our friends and loved ones, but by our misplaced expectations of others."

March Gregoroff considers her work as based upon the fundamental human tendency of Anticipation and Disappointment, and the resultant joy when we free ourselves of this cyclical burden; therefore, she attempts to use her paintings to make the Buddhist thought more accessible to art lovers on a visceral level – to be understood visually, without betting into the Verbal.

"... The ripe fruit, on the point of decay, and the prettily decomposing backgrounds of my work represent that tipping point of joyful anticipation and the ugly reality of all our dreams gone wrong. I find that food and the way I show it is the natural expression for all of the concepts that guide my own life; concepts that challenge me while bringing great peace and happiness..."

Using oil paints on canvas, March depicts the joy and disillusionment of everyday life through the metaphor of common objects. Combining abstract and realist components, she attempts to reconcile the changeability of life.

You could see her works exhibited in Toronto, Montréal, New York or California. Now for the first time her paintings will be shown in Muskoka.

STOP THE EXISTENCE, REGISTER THE NARRATIVE

"... We live in a world of disposability. We go through our lives bombarded by media imagery that reflects our world in a fleeting forgettable manner. This body of work is a reaction to this environment. Using the city as a point of departure, I explore how to stop the quick moving existence... These works exist and their goal is to mark a moment of time. Through the use of texture, color, and contrasts of light, I want to stop the viewer in their tracks and register the narrative."

For Marjolyn van der Hart, Toronto-based artist, paintings are more than just snapshots of time or place. They should also be the jumping off point for a lush narrative journey that evokes memories, whether real or imagined. "Painting for me is a form of communication," she says. "It's a way of expressing my subconscious reflections of our culture." From cyclists riding past cafés to children playing, couples in courtyards or the throes of courtship, her medium and large scale impressionist paintings emit the warmth of romance and comforts of home. "There's a familiarity to my work and I enter it that way," she explains. "The basis of the work is romance and romance comes from a place of escape so impressionism works in that context and the choice of subjects also works from that context."

The idea is to find that transient memory or create memories for viewers. "When images dissolve into one another it's all about memory and we never really see a thing for very long," Marjolyn explains. "It's also about shifting spaces; they way riding a bike past a café reminds you of another place, time and experience."

A mass communications and art history graduate, Marjolyn says her work came from a desire to define a female experience and perspective. "The things I love are small hidden spaces," she explains of her subject matter. "Alleys, doorways, always intimate space and lately the architecture stuff are blowing it open and the way people move in the architecture." While her paintings reflect familiar urban settings and streetscapes and are derived from a modern, European sensibility, they never feature cars, vehicles or factories. "Everything I paint has a protective element to it so I don't do vistas, fields, fields and open sky. I do places you can walk into where you're protected by the doorways, the buildings. It's a very female perspective and very domestic," she admits. But the appeal is universal.

Marjolyn grew up in Oakville, ON, the daughter of painter John van der Hart, noted for his abstract landscape watercolours. "I learned a lot about the business of art by growing up with professional artist," she says. Now she is painting full-time from her studio in Toronto's historic Distillery District. She exhibits widely in the United States and in Canada and her works contribute to many corporate collections (IBM, Merrill Lynch, CN Rail Ltd., Rogers Communications, to name a few) as well as private collections throughout Europe and North America. She has been granted numerous professional awards, including several "Best of Show," both in the US and Canada.

This is her first solo exhibition in Muskoka: "Shadow of Your Steps" (September 26 – October 21). For this show, Chancery Art Gallery has selected mostly urban themes of European flavour with some romantic and nostalgic touch. You can meet the artist at the exhibition opening reception on Thursday, September 27, from 4 PM to 7 PM.

"The Only Possible Teacher Except Torture..."

Bernard Shaw used to say: "The only possible teacher except torture is fine art." He definitely had a point. Besides, it is not a secret: arts improve health. The British Medical Journal recently provided another valuable argument to support this claim. It even suggests that a diversion of a small portion of the health budget to the arts would probably increase the health of the population. A tempting idea indeed. However, the general public seems to be in ignorance: the Canadian Forum on Arts and Health found that most people are still not aware of the benefits of the arts in relation to health and well-being...

From the Freudian view, arts derive from the same source as fantasies and dreams, and have the same purpose – to reduce tension in the soul. This applies to both creation and perception of the art, regardless of modality – painting, sculpture, literature, music, dance, etc. Thus, in some respects artists are not special – like the rest of us, they have the same narcissistic desires and fantasies, rather shameful to share under our cultural restraints. But unlike us, artists have a very special gift – they are able to exhibit their fantasies in a skilful, camouflaged way, and to attract us first with external, formal side of their work. It traps us, provoking a preliminary, properly aesthetic pleasure, turning our internal "censor" off guard. And then, it enables us to enjoy our own deep prohibited fantasies – projected on the art – without shame and self-blame, with revealing catharsis. How are artists able to do this? It's their mystic secret; it's art.

Therefore, some people would probably agree with a widespread psychoanalytical expression: "... The one thing which may in some degree reconcile the cultured person with life - scientific and artistic enjoyment..."

By the way, you do not necessarily have to go to New York City or Europe to enjoy the real contemporary art: right here in Muskoka - for a limited time left, though - you can see, or even perhaps acquire the canvas which normally are exhibited at galleries in Soho, Beverly Hills and Stockholm, appeared on TV and have been reviewed in the New York Times.

In August, The Muskokan newspaper has announced Chancery Art Gallery as "Muskoka's newest gallery." In September, it has been awarded as the "Business of the Month" by YWCA Muskoka. This gallery on Chancery Lane in downtown Bracebridge is being run by two psychology doctors and master of architecture.

Gallery is open through Tuesday-Saturday, 11am-2pm and 3pm-6pm

"Stolen" from Warner Bros. Television

When Warner Bros. Television had asked per-mission for shooting some original paintings in their new coming popular TV series, the artist's answer was "No".

Actually, his answer was: "I'd love to, but I can not give you all the painting you want since most of them have already been reserved by a gallery in Canada for my coming exhibition..." Consequently, the Warner Bros. had to pick their second choice from his remaining works.

DETAILS

In a few weeks, Warner Bros. will be presenting "Gossip Girl," which is expected to be "one of the top new fall shows." <sup>1</sup> Based on the popular book series of the same name, this drama <sup>2</sup> gives viewers a peek into the world of privileged teenagers attending elite private school in New York City, as told through the eyes of an anonymous blogger. Among other characters, the father of one of the girls owns an art gallery. To shoot the related scenes, Warner Bros. were looking for some art pieces suggestive of the spirit of a real Manhattan gallery. Therefore, they addressed New York artist Mikhail Gubin with an offer of contract to use some of his works in this new episode. However, the artist's answer was: "No... I'd love to, but most of the paintings you want have already been selected by Chancery Art Gallery for my coming exhibition in Canada..." Thus, the Warner Bros. had to make their second choice from his remaining works...

OPPORTUNITY

You do not have to go to New York City to enjoy the real contemporary art. Right here, in Muskoka, you can see, or even perhaps acquire the canvas so craved by the Warner Bros. Television - West Side, Brooklyn Bridge and West 32nd Street <sup>3</sup> - among other Gubin's works at his personal exhibition "It's Up To You, New York" at Chancery Art Gallery <sup>4</sup>. The exhibition runs until September 22nd.

<sup>1</sup> According to CTV's Fall Schedule, Canada will get day early airings of two drama premiers that are highly anticipated. The Gossip Girl will be airing at 8pm on Tuesday, September 18th. This is a day earlier than its September 19th premiere on The CW in the US.

<sup>2</sup> The story by The O.C.'s Josh Schwartz and Stephanie Savage, directed by Mark Piznarski who has worked on series like Everwood and Veronica Mars. Details available at

Hi from NY

- To some his paintings remind of the Die Brücke (The Bridge) movement of German expressionists at the beginning of the 20th century
- For some they resemble the neo-expressionist revival of the 1970-80s
- Some note that his beautifully scumbled, delicately coloured shapes reminiscent of Diebenkorn and de Kooning
- Though, famous sculptor Ernst Neizvestny believes that "...Gubin's work occupies a unique place in which there is synthesis of freedom of expression and feelings and true artistic professionalism"

Despite all of the art-theoretical interpretation and elucidation, a recent review in the Baltimore Arts & Culture was perhaps right to the point: "Gubin really knows how to move paint around..."

Beside the official recognition - world-wide exhibitions, numerous professional awards, reviews in the New York Times - Mr. Gubin seems to enjoy mostly the fact that one of his paintings ("Tango Argentina") has been selected by film director Al Pacino for display in the movie "Devil's Advocate"...

From August 24 to September 22
you can see 20 oils on canvas by Mikhail Gubin selected by the *Chancery Art Gallery**
for his solo exhibition

"It's Up to you, New York"

For this show we have selected mostly paintings (oil on canvas) of Manhattan urban landscapes, although other themes are also presented to reflect "NY multi-facet face" - flowers, race track, still life, and even award-winning "My cat"...

Opening reception with the artist:
Friday, August 24, from 4 PM to 7 PM

- In Los Angeles her work can be seen at Dafne Gallery in Beverly Hills
- In Sweden she is shown by Gunrammat Gallery in Stockholm

" In my work, I feel very connected to literature. I have always been captivated by a verbal metaphor. I look for a visual equivalent of a word, for poetic translation into the language of visual art... I'm interested in imagery that, unlike literature, is without narrative yet conveys a feeling just as strongly. Plotless paintings transform into still metaphors...."
